

Employee Counseling for Shop Stewards Training Course

Professional Development Training Course Outline

Category	Trade Unions	Duration	5 Days
Base Fee	$1,500 USD	Delivery Mode	Online / On-site Hybrid

Course Introduction

In today's dynamic industrial relations environment, shop stewards are expected to perform far beyond traditional grievance handling roles. Modern workplaces demand emotionally intelligent union representatives who can address employee wellness, workplace conflict, mental health concerns, productivity challenges, psychosocial risks, and organizational transformation while promoting harmonious labor relations. The Employee Counseling for Shop Stewards Training Course equips participants with skills necessary for effective employee representation in high-pressure and diverse work environments. The course integrates contemporary labor trends such as employee engagement, mental wellness, psychological safety, trauma-informed support, workplace diversity, resilience management, and occupational stress reduction.

As organizations increasingly focus on employee wellbeing, workplace inclusivity, psychosocial support systems, and sustainable labor relations, shop stewards must become trusted workplace counselors and employee advocates. This highly interactive training empowers participants to confidently manage employee grievances, workplace harassment concerns, absenteeism issues, burnout, disciplinary matters, and interpersonal conflicts using ethical counseling approaches and modern labor relations practices. Through practical case studies, simulations, role plays, coaching techniques, and workplace scenarios, participants gain actionable skills that improve workforce morale, trust building, dispute prevention, employee retention, and organizational productivity.
