Food Security and Livelihoods in Displacement Training Course

Professional Development Training Course Outline

Category	Migration and Refugee	Duration	5 Days
Base Fee	$1,500 USD	Delivery Mode	Online / On-site Hybrid

Course Introduction

Food security and sustainable livelihoods are fundamental challenges in displacement settings, where communities face disruptions caused by conflicts, natural disasters, and forced migration. Effective interventions require a deep understanding of the complexities of food systems, local economies, and humanitarian frameworks. Food Security and Livelihoods in Displacement Training Course equips participants with practical skills, analytical tools, and evidence-based strategies to enhance food access, ensure nutritional adequacy, and strengthen livelihoods for displaced populations. Participants will engage with real-world case studies, best practices, and innovative approaches to address food insecurity in fragile contexts.

The course emphasizes the integration of sustainable livelihood strategies, market-based interventions, and community-centered approaches to improve resilience among displaced populations. It provides participants with the knowledge to assess vulnerability, design context-specific interventions, and monitor program effectiveness. By combining theoretical foundations with practical applications, the course prepares humanitarian practitioners, development professionals, and policy-makers to contribute meaningfully to food security and livelihood programming in displacement contexts.
