Course Introduction

Training Course on Conflict and Development: Addressing the Economic Impacts of Fragility and Violence

Introduction

Conflict and violence pose significant challenges to sustainable development, undermining economic growth and exacerbating poverty in affected regions. Training Course on Conflict and Development: Addressing the Economic Impacts of Fragility and Violence is designed for practitioners, policymakers, and researchers who seek to understand the complex interplay between conflict and development. Participants will explore the economic impacts of fragility and violence, focusing on strategies to mitigate these effects and promote stability. By analyzing case studies and engaging in practical exercises, attendees will gain insights into the dynamics of conflict-affected economies.

In an increasingly interconnected world, addressing the economic consequences of conflict is essential for fostering resilient communities and sustainable development. This course emphasizes the importance of integrating conflict-sensitive approaches into development planning and programming. Participants will learn how to design interventions that not only address immediate needs but also contribute to long-term peacebuilding and economic recovery. By the end of the course, attendees will be equipped with the tools and knowledge necessary to advocate for and implement effective conflict-sensitive development strategies.
