Training Course on Education Leadership for the Green Economy Transition

Professional Development Training Course Outline

Category	Educational Leadership and Management	Duration	5 Days
Base Fee	$1,500 USD	Delivery Mode	Online / On-site Hybrid

Course Introduction

In today’s rapidly evolving world, education leadership plays a critical role in driving the shift toward a green economy. Training Course on Education Leadership for the Green Economy Transition equips educational leaders, policymakers, and development practitioners with the tools to champion sustainable development goals (SDGs) through transformative green education systems. By embedding environmental literacy, climate-smart strategies, and sustainability-focused curricula, this program empowers leaders to reshape educational institutions for a low-carbon, resilient future. The course is designed to integrate systems thinking, innovation, and inclusive learning approaches to address both global and local environmental challenges.

Through a blend of theoretical frameworks and hands-on tools, participants will explore how to foster eco-conscious leadership, influence policy reform, and align institutional missions with green economy imperatives. The course highlights strategic planning, stakeholder engagement, climate adaptation education, and cross-sectoral collaboration to build capacity in green policy implementation. By completing this program, leaders will be able to accelerate the transition toward a net-zero economy, while positioning education as the driving force for equitable and regenerative development.
