Course Introduction

Training Course on Poverty Analysis and Measurement

Introduction

Poverty analysis and measurement are essential components in understanding the multifaceted nature of poverty and its impact on societies. Training Course on Poverty Analysis and Measurement aims to equip participants with the skills needed to analyze various poverty metrics and apply them effectively in real-world situations. By exploring both quantitative and qualitative approaches, attendees will gain insights into the complexities of poverty, enabling them to make informed policy decisions and contribute to sustainable development strategies.

Through this course, participants will delve into different poverty measurement techniques, including income-based metrics and multidimensional poverty indices. They will learn to evaluate the strengths and limitations of each method, interpret poverty data, and assess the effectiveness of poverty alleviation programs. By the end of the course, attendees will be adept at utilizing statistical tools to analyze poverty and will be prepared to communicate their findings to stakeholders effectively.
